

News Release

September 5, 2007

Mississippi Office of Homeland Security Offers Seminar to Harden Institutions of Higher Learning

---

Contact: Todd Frier
601-346-1509

In collaboration with the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, as well as several other higher education entities, the Mississippi Office of Homeland Security (MOHS) is offering a secure campus seminar for campus executives. The Homeland Security Planning for Campus Executives seminar is being held on September 11 at the MOHS offices on Raymond Road in Jackson. “We are offering an opportunity for the leaders of these campuses to learn vital safety and security information, which is designed to aid in preventing, preparing against, mitigating, and recovering from any man-made or natural crisis,” said J.W. Ledbetter, Director of the Mississippi Office of Homeland Security.

The Mississippi Office of Homeland Security has the distinct honor and duty of providing leadership in the protection of the citizens of this great state. Our office is tasked with providing leadership for preventing, preparing against, mitigating, and recovering from any man-made or natural crisis. The safety and security of students, faculty, staff and other members of campus communities are issues that are vital to this mission.